THE rumour to which the Tientsin native paper has lately given currency, to the effect that the elders of Tientsin and surrounding district have petitioned for the extension of correct. It is quite in consonance with our line from Taku to Tientsin caused some little opposition at first, as it interfered with extension, dreading the revolutionary effect they supposed it would have on the Chinese mind. But there has been no disquieting symptom evolved by the pacific rumble of the yesterday afternoon, to consider the question of train, and it has earned a dividend for the obtaining mb cription griffins for the next sea-Company. It is a great and obvious convenience to the public, and it is natural the capital. The Viceroy will be ready to advocate such extension, and possibly Prince Chun may support him, but there are still many opponents of progress in any form and baters of the railway in particular in Peking who will do their best to prevent the line ever reaching Tungchow. The great mass of the Chinese officials do not want railways or any cognate innovation; they are unmoved by the argument that the Tientsin railway is a financial success and a great aid to the development of commerce; the only plea likely to tell with theme is that it may be a useful weapon in the event of war; and hence they are prepared to sauction the construction of strategic lines, not likely to prove remunerative, while routes connecting great commercial centres are disregarded or postponed. Thus, it is stated the oristing line is to be continued from Lutai to Shan-hai-kwan, a military station close to the seaward termination of the Great Wall, a distanceabout double that from Tientsin to Tungchow, and passing through no large towns, tapping no great centre of production. But it is part of the scheme of the strategic rulway system devised for the better defence of the coast, and hence commends it self to the mandarins. Probably both lines will be HONGKONG TRADING Co., LD. made eventually, perhaps before very long. but it is as well to discount all reports about railways in China, for experience has shown that however much a line may have to recommend it there may be influences at work in Peking that will be brought to bear to defer the work, even after it has received the Imperial sanction. Nevertheless it is gratifying to hear rumours of the kind above referred to. It may not be wholly correct, but where there is smoke there is usually some fire, and we can only hope the friends of the railway in the North are really becoming infuential enough to bring pressure on the Authorities, and win for it a fair trial not only in Chihli but in other parts of the

WITH THE PUNTY AND MANDERIN PRONUNCIATION. re-engraved in a superior style and brought up An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, if Trikong, For comprehensiveness are practical service, this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size it is published, or to any of the following Agents of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, schiering a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore charactarized Chinese publications To illustrate the vast score of the work the following facts are submitted for consideration:-Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the quires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examiles this work contains more than five times as many as any other Diotionary hitherto pub-

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested 3 & 4. Bouverie St., Fleet St. in China it cannot but be invaluable occasion.
